Your good letter of July 1, arrived while I was in Europe, and I imagine my reply will reach you in

I only wish that I could visit you there. I have had many pleasant days in that delightful country and I should like to add to them with you. Unfortunately, however, having recently returned, I see no chance of getting away again until Congress adjourns.

With regard to the question of memoirs, I have decided that I should not seriously consider any project until I really have the time to do some work along these lines, if I ever decide that I can properly do so. Much of what I am doing now cannot be written about for some time. Nevertheless, I am deeply touched and gratified at your interest and we can have a further talk when I next see you.

Sincerely,

(Signed) ALLEN W. DULLES
